Introduction

For many years, patrons have been able to borrow audio described VHS videotapes from the Perkins Braille & Talking Book Library. With advances in technology, the VHS videotape is becoming less popular, and the digital versatile disc (DVD) has emerged as the industry favorite. Feedback from borrowers has indicated a strong interest for the Library to consider making described DVDs available on loan, just as the described VHS videotape collection has been available for the past five years.

The Audio Described DVD Video Collection provides borrowers with access to described videos that can be played with your own DVD player and television. No other special equipment is required. Of course, our existing VHS described video collection continues to be available for loan.

Described video technology was invented by Boston's own WGBH in the 1980s and was launched on several public television programs. Described video, also known as audio description, is now available on DVDs, as well as on some commercial television programs, feature films in specially equipped movie theaters, museum exhibits, and live theater performances.

This DVD Catalog lists more than 250 DVD titles that have been acquired by the Perkins Library to launch this new collection. The decision to offer audio described DVDs was a complex one to make due to several factors. While we are pleased to offer the DVD collection to our borrowers, there continues to be concern surrounding the usability and accessibility of audio described DVDs.

What are Described DVDs?

Descriptive DVDs contain a soundtrack with narration of the key visual elements of the film to make them accessible to viewers with visual disabilities. These key visual elements include any part of a presentation that blind or visually impaired viewers would ordinarily miss, such as the characters' actions, costumes, gestures, and facial expressions, as well as scene changes and onscreen text. Understanding these visual elements is often essential to fully understanding the program or film. The descriptive narration soundtrack is inserted during natural pauses in the program's dialogue. The end result is a finished soundtrack that is clear and understandable as well as entertaining, and the film's video can also be enjoyed by low vision viewers, sighted family members and friends.

Using Audio Described DVDs

Unlike the audio described VHS videotapes that automatically start up and play when inserted into a VHS player, some audio described DVDs do not contain full accessibility. The DVDs from AudioVision Canada (AVC) are self-starting DVDs and will begin to play automatically with description. However, most DVD content from the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) or WGBH and DVDs from commercial motion picture studios do not begin automatically with description. These DVDs require the use of your specific DVD player's on-screen menu to navigate down through the selections to the choice for Accessibility Options or Languages or Audio on the DVD's main menu display.

Realizing that every brand and model of DVD player on the market differ from one another, it is not possible for us to provide detailed directions on how to use audio described DVDs with each type of player. You will need to develop some familiarity with your DVD player and learn its basic navigation and keypad layout. To assist you in knowing if the DVD you have received from the Perkins Library has automatic description start-up or not, the Library has put a large print and braille sticker on the outside of the DVD case that says: "Audio navigation is not available on this DVD. Assistance may be needed to start this DVD."

If the DVD is from AudioVision Canada, the description starts automatically. You don't need to do anything except put the DVD in your player and play the DVD.

If the DVD is from WGBH or PBS, including such programs as NOVA, Masterpiece Theater, Mystery, or Between the Lions, then the audio description feature is listed under "Accessibility Options" in the Main Menu. Click on Accessibility Options and then click on Audio Description.

If the DVD is from a commercial studio such as 20th Century Fox, Paramount Pictures or Universal, then the audio description feature can be found under "Languages" or "Audio" in the Main Menu, and then click on "Audio Description."

If the DVD is a Sesame Street program, the audio description is listed under "Settings."

There is no question that the accessibility of DVDs for blind and low vision users is not ideal, and the Perkins Library had to make the difficult decision whether or not to purchase partially accessible DVDs or wait until more accessibility is obtained through advocacy and/or government regulation. We did not feel that waiting for either of those solutions would effectively meet patron requests for audio described DVDs or responsive library service. We made the decision to start collecting audio described DVDs now, to provide you with as much information as we can on the container to help you in planning for viewing of your audio described DVDs, and to continue to promote to the industry more availability of audio description in films and greater accessibility to the DVD itself.

We will continue to advocate for improved accessibility to DVDs for people who are blind or have low vision, and we will enlist your support along the way to tell your stories about the limited accessibility of DVDs and how that has affected your viewing experience. In the meantime, we have tried to provide you with the best collection it is currently possible for us to purchase. Not all commercial movies are released with audio description; and again, more advocacy is needed to convince the motion picture industry that audio description is an important accommodation to the film's visual content. Access to movies and other video programming is part of our culture, and we are pleased we can offer you this small collection of audio described DVD content. We will continue to work to grow this collection, and to enhance and expand our advocacy efforts so that some day audio description can be a regular feature of DVDs just as closed captioning is today.

If you are interested in helping in the advocacy efforts to make DVDs more accessible, feel free to contact the Perkins Library for more information. We hope you enjoy using audio described DVDs from the Perkins Library, and feel free to contact us if you should have any questions.

Equipment Required to Use Described DVDs

Individuals interested in borrowing described DVDs must have access to a television and DVD player. No special equipment is necessary since the descriptions are part of the movie audio – just put the DVD into your player. No other special equipment is needed to enjoy described DVDs. The Perkins Library does not provide or loan VCRs, DVD players, or television sets.

Loan Policy

The following loan policies are in effect for borrowers using described DVDs:

- The loan period is 14 days. The actual check out date is printed on the mailing card on the container in which the DVD was received.
- An individual may borrow one DVD title at a time per loan period.
- Borrowers must be registered, active users of the Perkins Braille & Talking Book Library.
- There is no charge to borrow described DVDs from the Perkins Library.
- Another DVD title may not be checked out until the title currently checked out is received and checked back in by Library staff.
- There will be no renewals for described DVDs due to heavy demand on the collection.
- There is no limit to the number of DVD requests that a person may place on file for future loan. The first available DVD on a borrower's request list will be sent automatically each time a DVD is returned.
- DVD titles may not be reserved for specific dates due to high demand on the collection.
- Borrowers are responsible for the replacement cost if a DVD is damaged.
- Anyone under the age of 18 may not borrow R-rated DVDs.
- No fees may be charged to anyone attending a group showing of a described DVD.
- DVDs do not need to be rewound. After finishing viewing of a described DVD, place the DVD back in its specially labeled container. Please mail it back to the Perkins Braille & Talking Book Library by inserting it into the original mailing container, and turning the address card over so the Library's address is facing up. Library DVDs may be mailed "Free Matter for the Blind or Handicapped." No postage is required.

How to Order Described DVDs

Ordering audio described DVDs is easy! Building a large request list of specific DVD titles is the best way to ensure that you continue to have a regular supply of described DVDs. Feel free to use the DVD Order Form at the back of this catalog to submit a large request list that Library staff can select from to fill your orders. Once you return a DVD, another one can be sent from your request list. If you do not have any DVD titles on your request list, nothing will be sent to you until you contact the Library with a request.

Every described DVD has a number beginning with the letters DVD. Borrowers can order DVDs with the specific DVD number or by title through the following options:

By Telephone: 617-972-7240 or 1-800-852-3133

By Fax: 617-972-7363

Care and Handling Tips for DVDs

The following pointers will help to ensure long life and effective usage of DVDs. Please follow the recommendations below to preserve the DVDs, assist Library staff in expediting returns, and making sure videos are in good condition for the next borrower.

Please handle DVDs gently, by the outer edge or the center hole. Try to avoid touching the surface of the DVD.

Extreme temperature conditions are not good for DVDs. Do not expose DVDs to extreme heat, cold, high humidity, or extreme rapid temperature or humidity changes. DVDs can melt, so please remember not to place them near stoves, heaters or radiators. The heat of a closed car or direct sunlight are also major factors in DVD damage.

In cold weather, allow DVDs to warm to room temperature before inserting into your DVD player. Extreme cold temperatures can make the plastic of the DVD brittle, so be especially careful not to drop a cold DVD onto a hard surface to avoid shattering.

Remember that dust, dirt, food particles, and liquids will all cause damage if they get on the DVD. Condensation on the DVD will cause difficulty in playing the DVD in your player.

To remove dirt, foreign material, fingerprints, smudges, or liquids from the DVDs surface, wipe it with a clean cotton cloth in a straight line from the center of the DVD toward the outer edge. Do not try to clean the DVD in a circular motion around the surface of the disc. This will cause damage to the DVD.

Store DVDs upright (book style) in their plastic cases designed specifically for DVDs. Return DVDs to their storage cases immediately after use. Store DVDs in a cool, dry, dark environment in which the air is clean.

Following these tips should improve your overall video experience.

Using the Online Catalog to Find Available Described DVDs

To find out which DVDs are available, follow the steps below:

Search for a DVD by title.

- Using Basic Search, proceed as follows: Type the name of the movie in the "Search For" field. In the "Search Index" field select the radio button (circle) for title. Continue down the choices to the "Limit By" section, where you can limit your search in the "Media" field by selecting "Described DVD" from the drop-down menu. Also limit the "Language" field to "All Languages," the "Age/Reading Level" field to "All Reading Levels" and the "Fiction/Nonfiction" field to "Fiction and Nonfiction." Submit your search, and review the results.

Search for a DVD with a specific actor or actress.

- Using the Basic Search, proceed as follows: In the "Search For" field type the name of the performer (Example: Humphrey Bogart). In the "Search Index" field highlight the "Annotation" radio button (circle). In the "Sort By" field, choose Title, Book Number or Year Published. In the "Limit by:" section, limit your search in the "Media" field by selecting "Described DVD" from the drop-down menu. Also limit the "Language" field to "All Languages," the "Age/Reading Level" field to "All Reading Levels" and the "Fiction/Nonfiction" field to "Fiction and Nonfiction." Submit your search, and review the results.

Search for a DVD with a specific film rating.

- Using Basic Search, proceed as follows: In the "Search For" field type the code for the rating you want (Example: G, PG, PG-13, R, NR). THE BIG COMBO 1955 NR

Police Lt. Diamond (Cornel Wilde) is told to close surveillance of suspected mob boss Mr. Brown (Richard Conte). It's costing the department too much money. Diamond makes one last attempt against Brown by using his secret weapon, Brown's girlfriend, Susan Lowell (Jean Wallace). The Big Combo is a crime melodrama that blends overt sexuality with graphic violence at a level seldom seen in films of the 1950s. It is, of course, in that respect, nothing compared to the explicitness of current films. But there is a brutality about how the film's story plays out that still delivers quite a jolt today. 89 MIN.

Other Resources

Audio Description is available in other arenas besides VHS videos and DVDs. Below, you will find resources for linking up with audio description on television, in movie theaters, in live theater performances, and in museum exhibitions. Feel free to contact any of the organizations listed below for more details on their specific audio description services.

Description on Television

The availability of description on television has grown dramatically since the national debut of WGBH's Descriptive Video Service on PBS in January 1990.

Description is available on programs carried by the following commercial networks and cable providers:

CBS	Nickelodeon	Narrative Television Network
Fox	PBS	Turner Classic Movies

To access description on television, a viewer must live within range of a television station that broadcasts description and have a stereo TV or a stereo VCR that includes the Second Audio Program (SAP) feature, standard on most newer stereo televisions and DVD players. Viewers who subscribe to cable or satellite TV should ask their provider to "pass through" stereo with SAP.

Description at the Movies

Massachusetts is on the cutting edge of accessibility for described movies in the theater. Many major theaters are currently equipped with the special technology to broadcast description in the theater. Viewers checkout a headset and receiver from the Customer Service Counter at the theater to listen to the description during the movie.

To subscribe to a weekly email listing of described movies, send an e-mail message to library@perkins.org and request to be placed on the list for Movie Access Updates.

To confirm the schedule and times for described movies, contact the theaters listed below or visit www.mopix.org.
